Lesson Five: The Family that Plays Together and Prays Together

Look Back: 10 Minutes

1. What healthy conflict principles did you put into practice this week? How did it affect the conflict and/or your relationship?
2. Were there moments you did not handle conflict in a healthy way this week? If so, did you apologize and seek to make things right? How did it change the relational dynamic? In retrospect, what could you have done differently?
3. Share the most valuable lessons you've learned from Get Healthy: Family.

Look Forward: 50 Minutes

"I love you and I like you".

I can't recall the exact moment JP coined this phrase, but I do remember how our kid's faces lit up each time he spoke the words.

So I stole them. And made them my own. I must have said these words a thousand times over the years.

Because that's what you do when you find something someone else does that makes a relationship healthier. You steal it. Copy it. Do it. Repeat it. Until one day, it's not something someone else does; it's something you do.

This is the beauty of being part of Get Healthy: Family; the material is designed to help each of us think, Oh that's how healthy families function. I can do that! This is also why it's vital to stay connected to a healthy community, and healthy people, even after Get Healthy: Family ends. No one becomes healthy in isolation. We get healthy by being with healthy people, who do life in healthy ways.

This week we turn our attention toward creating a family whose members love each other and like each other, because that's how truly healthy families function, and feel.

I love you. And I like you.

Thankfully, it's not as complicated as you might think.

1. Proverbs 17:22 says:

*“A joyful heart is good medicine,
but a crushed spirit dries up the bones.”*

a. What is good for you and good for your family?

b. What is not good for you, or your family?

Have you ever heard, “laughter is the best medicine”? Now you know where the phrase originated—right here in Proverbs 17:22!

There’s good reason this phrase gained notoriety. Medicine makes sick people healthy. If a joyful heart is good medicine (and it is!), then a joyful heart is a healing balm for an unhealthy family.

Laughter is an indicator of family health and marital health.

2. On a scale from 1-10 (low to high), how fun is your family? How would your husband, children, siblings or grandchildren answer this question?

a. How often do you laugh together: Daily? Weekly? Monthly? Never.

b. Do you regularly play together as a couple? As a family? If not, why not? What stops you? Be specific.

People bond over shared activities. That’s why we bond with our co-workers, or parents on our child’s sports team. When positive feelings are associated with a shared activity, relationship flourish. So, if work is going well, relationships with co-workers probably are, too. If the sports team is winning, the players and parents feel connected in a positive way.

Doesn’t it make sense then, to make space for our family members to bond with each other through shared fun, positive activities?

The family that plays together stays together.

And here’s the beautiful part: Laughter and play are free!

Your family's idea of fun might be different from another family's idea of fun. What you do for fun together isn't important; that you do have fun together is. If we cultivate joy within our homes, we won't have to look for joy outside our homes. Your home will be a place your people want to be.

Smart families give their attention to each other, not their smart phones.

- c. Write down one thing you will do this week to help your family have fun together: _____

Shared positive experiences bond people together but shared positive expressions bond people together, too!

- d. How do you think expressing something positive about a family member relates to "A joyful heart is good medicine"?
- e. How do you think expressing appreciation or admiration could help prevent family members from feeling "crushed in spirit"?

Sometimes positive expressions are most powerful in the context of negative circumstances. When family members fail or falter, our unconditional love can save them from the crushing burden of feeling the need to be perfect, or bearing the heavy weight of shame.

Healthy families don't operate on "I love you if..." but "I love you. Period."

- f. Identify one family member who most needs to hear a positive expression from you this week. Who is it? _____

So let's recap: A joyful heart is the medicine unhealthy families need to be healthy.

But I can almost hear what some of you are thinking: Well, that's all fine and good, but my family is filled with dysfunction. Abuse. Hurt. Anger. Addiction. So, where are the good gifts God seems to give everyone else, but me?

Oh, sweet friend, how desperately I want you to experience all the goodness God intends for you, and your family! But more important, God wants you to experience His goodness toward you. (Yes, you. The one whose heart has been wounded so many times you're almost scared to hope for joy.) Right now, would you—could you—crack open the door of your heart just a smidge, so God can pour the light of His love, His mercy, His hope and His truth, into your wounded places?

That fact that you are reading these words, in this moment, is an indicator God is at work in your life, and therefore, He's at work in your family, too. Let's see if we can shed light on a major reason not every family experiences the joy God intends.

3. Read Jesus' words recorded in John 10:10, written below.

*"The thief comes only to steal and kill and destroy;
I came that they may have life, and have it abundantly."*

- a. What did Jesus come to give us? What did Jesus come to give you?

- b. What does our enemy (the thief, Satan) intend to do? List the three things your enemy wants to do to you, and your family.

- c. Can you identify any way in which Satan is seeking to kill, steal, and/or destroy you, your family, or your family member right now? Use the list below as your guide.
 - We are too busy to really connect with each other
 - We have unresolved conflict and issues we haven't dealt with
 - We often don't make time for church
 - We aren't on the same page (parenting, sex, money, parents, schedule)
 - We have lots of tension in our home, and very little fun
 - We've become critical of one another
 - Technology often keeps us from face-to-face interaction
 - We complain over small things
 - We deal with addiction or mental health issues
 - We are disconnected from other Christians
 - We have a family member who is making poor choices
 - We have a rebellious child
 - We have a dysfunctional or difficult extended family member
 - We have financial debt
 - We live under constant pressure
 - We deal with problems at school or at work
 - We have secrets, lying and integrity issues
 - We rarely have sex
 - Other

- d. It's one thing to realize Satan is trying to destroy your family; it's another thing to allow him to do it. So, now we're going deep, ok? (After five weeks together, it's time.) Can you identify *any way you have allowed Satan to kill, steal, or destroy your family's unity, joy, intimacy, communication, connection to God, or emotional, relational, or spiritual health?

- e. If you answered yes, what will you do about it? (It's not enough to know a thief is robbing your home; you have to stop him from robbing your home!)

If I could sit with you face to face, here's what I'd want you to know: Jesus wants to help you. He wants to infuse you with hope. He came to earth so you could have abundant life here and now, and also in the life to come. But you must allow Him to help you. You must choose to do things His way.

I'd also want you to know this: you can only do your part; you can't do someone else's part. Allow Jesus to make you healthy. As we discussed in lesson one, healthy families are made of healthy people. We must start at the right place: with ourselves.

So, now let's turn a corner. We've discussed how people bond over shared positive experiences and shared positive expressions. We've seen how our enemy seeks to destroy those positive bonds. Let's look at how this works itself out, specifically in marriage.

- 4. The Bible mentions only two places Satan can get a "foothold" into our relationships: First, in unresolved conflict ("Don't let the sun go down on your anger. Anger gives a foothold to the devil." Ephesians 4: 27). The second one is found in 1 Corinthians 7:2-5 (NLT), written below.

"But because there is so much sexual immorality, each man should have his own wife, and each woman should have her own husband.³ The husband should fulfill his wife's sexual needs, and the wife should fulfill her husband's needs. ⁴ The wife gives authority over her body to her husband, and the husband gives authority over his body to his wife.⁵ Do not deprive each other of sexual relations, unless you both agree to refrain from sexual intimacy for a limited time so you can give yourselves more completely to prayer. Afterward, you should come together again so that Satan won't be able to tempt you (get a foothold) because of your lack of self-control."

Families bond through fun. Couples bond through sex.

- a. According to verses 2 and 5b, why should you make sexual intimacy a priority in your marriage?

Throughout the course of a lifetime together, there will be times when sexual intimacy must be put on hold: after the birth of a child, or because of an illness or physical limitation, for example. But even in these moments, when sexual intimacy takes a back seat, relational intimacy shouldn't.

Not if you want your marriage, and your family, to remain healthy.

Sex is a gift from God—a good gift! I once heard a speaker say “single women tend to over-value sex; married women tend to under-value sex.” I wish you could have heard the crowd's response; she clearly hit a nerve.

5. God created sex to bond a husband and wife for at least six reasons. Look up the following scriptures, and note what each teaches about the purpose of sex. Match each verses with the purpose written below.

___ Genesis 1:28

___ Genesis 2:24; Ephesians 5:31-33

___ Genesis 4:1 (hint: your version may say “made love”, but in the original Hebrew, the word is “knew”)

___ 2 Samuel 12:24; Genesis 24:67

___ Proverbs 5:18-19

___ 1 Corinthians 7:2, 5

- a. Pleasure
- b. Procreation
- c. Comfort/relieve stress
- d. Defense against temptation
- e. Intimate knowledge
- f. Oneness

God purposed our sexuality to be the ultimate positive experience—one that would bond one man, to one woman, for life.

If the sexual area of your life leaves something to be desired, please know there is hope. You aren't the only one. Please take time to review the lessons on talking, listening, and resolving conflict. Sex is 10% physical, and 90% mental/relational. Don't be content to allow the enemy to steal, kill, or destroy what God intended as a gift for your good.

Families bond through fun. Couples bond through sex. Everyone bonds through communication, affection, and understanding. These are the ways we support each other. Build each other. Take care of each other. Love each other.

But there's one final way families become healthy--it's the most important component: God is the centerpiece, not the add-on.

6. Read Deuteronomy 6:4-9, written below, and answer the following questions

⁴ Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God, the Lord is one. ⁵ Love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your strength. ⁶ These commandments that I give you today are to be on your hearts. ⁷ Impress them on your children. Talk about them when you sit at home and when you walk along the road, when you lie down and when you get up. ⁸ Tie them as symbols on your hands and bind them on your foreheads. ⁹ Write them on the doorframes of your houses and on your gates.

- a. In verse 4, The Lord is called whose God? "The Lord ____ God, the Lord is one."
- b. How are you cultivating the knowledge that "that the Lord is our God" with your family?

Even if you have family members who have no interest in God, God is still interested in them! And here's the thing: when you can't talk to your family about God, you can talk to God about your family. It's called prayer.

How do we pray for our family? When do we pray for our family? What do we pray for our family?

You don't have to be a theologian to pray; you simply need to be a woman who loves her family.

Prayer is simply talking with God, so we can pray for our family any time, anywhere: with our kids at bedtime (let them pray, and also let them hear us pray blessings over their lives); with our family before meals; as we drive children to school; with our spouse when we go to bed, or when we wake up. We can pray when no one else is around, or when everyone else is around! When we pray isn't the issue--that we pray, is.

It's helpful though, to develop a habit of praying for your immediate family members daily. Pick a time and place. You may even want to buy a journal to record your prayers.

A wise mentor once told me, “When you write down your prayers you are writing your history in advance.”

7. Below you’ll find a suggested list of things to pray for your family members. These are by no means exhaustive--simply a place to start. Choose a few to pray over your family members every day, beginning today.

- They would know and love God
- They would follow Jesus
- Wisdom
- Character
- Good friends
- Favor with God and people
- Health, safety and protection
- Future spouse
- Moral integrity
- Discern God’s will
- Freedom from bondage, addiction, etc.
- Godly, wise mentors
- Success as a result of their diligence and hard work
- They would know God loves them

Pray with your family if you can. Pray for your family no matter what.

God has good intentions for you and your family. He wants you to know Him, and love Him, because He knows you, and loves you, already. God wants all people, over all time, to understand His great love. This is why He instructs parents to pass it on to their children, so those children can pass it on to their children, and so on.

God made families. God loves families.

God made your family. God loves your family.

God wants your family to be healthy, and holy, and whole. He wants you to love each other, listen to each other, talk to each other, work through conflict with each other, enjoy each other, and love Him, with each other.

These things, sweet friend, are what healthy families actually do.

And what do you do when you find something someone else does that makes a relationship healthier? You steal it. Copy it. Do it. Repeat it.

Until one day, it’s not something someone else does; it’s something you do.

Life Application:

1. Review the material in Get Healthy: Family. Choose one thing you will commit to improve to help your family become healthier.
2. Pray for your family members each day. Your prayer doesn't have to be long—just heartfelt. Pray for your family member's relational and spiritual lives. Pray for yourself to be emotionally and spiritually healthy, so you can bring emotional and spiritual health to your family.
